Prevent Duty Guidance and Promoting British Values

Our setting believes in providing a curriculum which promotes spiritual, moral, cultural, mental and physical development which prepares them for the next steps in their lives. Promoting and valuing equality and diversity as well as community cohesion is integral to our work.

We believe that British values; as referred to in the 'Prevent Duty Guidance 2015' requires us to teach children the values of democracy through sharing, reaching decisions and valuing each other's differences. The focus on Personal, Social and Emotional development in the Early Years Curriculum ensures that we are promoting these values.

It is our duty to make sure the children in our care are safe and that their welfare is of paramount importance. Therefore through robust safeguarding procedures and with due regard to the prevent duty we endeavour to protect children from extremism and radicalisation through our policies, procedures and practices.
